A MESSAGE TO MOTHERS OF LITTLE TOTS

For To-Day, Wednesday, February 19th, We Announce a Special Presentation of CHILDREN'S COATS! FOR THE SPRING OF 1913!

If you have a child to buy spring clothes for, you will appreciate the savings on these Coats. We hold this sale to destroy the fallacy that early spring Paris styles must of necessity be prohibitive in price. Some notable examples below:

4 Exclusive Models at Prices That Are Exclusive With Us:

The new children's Cheviot Reefers. These short, well cut coats are made in the double-breasted style, with buttons and side pockets. Pretty red and tan with embroidered emblem on sleeve, two to six years. These $2.00 coats will be $3.50.

Girls coats in three-fourths length, single-breasted, belted at back and trimmed with fancy buttons. The new tulle-trimmed side pockets, light tan mixtures; eight to fourteen years. Made to sell for $6.50. Special $5.00.

Full-length girl's coats of Shepherd plaid. Collars of green moire; large buttons and side pockets. Single-breasted cut, with belt at back. Fancy button-trimmed, eight to fourteen years. Special $8.50.

Among the Richmond people making a name in the musical world is Miss Bettie Booker, who now makes her home, when in Virginia, at Charlottesville. Miss Booker spends most of every year in London, but has recently returned to this country, and is now in New York. Last Saturday night she sang at a very beautiful dinner given by Mrs. Charles Senff, of New York and Virginia, in honor of Miss Wilson, daughter of President-Elect Wilson. The dinner and recital were very fashionable functions, and many distinguished guests were present. Miss Booker will sing in Richmond some time during the spring.

ALMOST LOST HER REASON

But Thanks To An Old Friend, This Terrible Catastrophe Was Avoided

Tampa, Fla.—Mrs. E. C. Coram, of No. 2905 Highland Ave., says: "I was very weak and worn out from womanly troubles. My husband bought me two bottles of Cardui to take as a tonic, and from the first day it seemed to me I felt its good effects."

By the time I had used the two bottles I felt and looked like a new woman.

Some time later I got my feet wet at the wrong time, and I turned to Cardui to remedy the mischief done. Before I had taken one bottle it gave me the needed relief.

Again, in later life, when passing over a critical time, I almost lost my reason, but thanks to three or four bottles of Cardui, I did not. That has been 15 years ago. I am now 59 years of age, and feeling fine.

I constantly praise Cardui to all my sick friends.

It is a wonderful remedy. This earnest letter should take from your mind any doubt you might have as to the merits of Cardui, the woman's tonic. Mrs. Coram is certainly competent to recommend Cardui, since it helped her over three critical stages of life.

Don't neglect your troubles longer. Get a bottle of Cardui to-day.

OLD NAME OF COLONNA MISSING FROM ANNUAL

For First Time in 300 Years Not on List of Lay Dignitaries of the Papacy.

BY LA MARQUISE DE PONTENOY. On the first time in 300 years the historic name of Colonna is missing from the list of principal lay dignitaries of the Papacy, as enumerated in the Annuario Pontificio, or Gerarchia, for 1913, just issued by the Vatican and which is nothing more nor less than the official annual of the Roman Catholic Church.

When the late Marc Antonio, twelfth Prince of Colonna, twelfth Duke of Palliano and of Marino, etc., died last year without male issue, the hereditary office of prince assistant of the pontifical throne should have gone, along with all his other titles and honors, to his brother and successor, Don Fabrizio Colonna, married to Dona Olimpia Doria. But Don Fabrizio is a Senator of the kingdom of Italy and a general of Italian cavalry, and so thoroughly identified with the court of the quinal and the Italian government that he declined to sacrifice them for the sake of the high office awaiting him at the Vatican. This being the case, he was relieved of the dignity of prince assistant of the pontifical throne, as of course it was out of the question for him to do so in conjunction with a seat in the Italian Senate and a commission in the Italian cavalry.

As Prince Philip Orsini, the other prince assistant of the pontifical throne, was years ago overtaken by ruin and disaster and deprived by the Italian courts of control of his property, as a spendthrift, at the instance of his family and has in consequence been unable to fulfill his duties at the court of the Vatican, the Pope is now on state occasions deprived of the support of one of the most picturesque and venerable of his courtiers. In the lifetime of the late Don Marc Antonio Colonna, he presented a very impressive appearance at every ceremony in which the Pontiff appeared, standing immediately to the right of the Holy Father, on the dais beside the throne, arrayed in a striking and costly costume of black silk, with slashed doublet and hose, black silk stockings, silver-buckled shoes, lace ruff and collar and lace sleeves, rapier with a steel hilt, etc.

The office of "Stator proximus a sede Pontificia" was abolished during the reign of Sixtus V., and was conferred by that Pontiff upon the chiefs of the two houses of Colonna and of Orsini of the day, with the object of putting an end to the wars which had until that time been carried on for hundreds of years by these two rival families against one another. From the sixteenth to the sixteenth century the fights between the Colonnas and the Orsini constantly caused blood to flow in the streets of Rome. At length, when an Orsini and a Colonna had so far forgotten the respect due to the emperor and masterful Pope Sixtus V., as to draw their swords upon one another when in his presence, he, with the object of parting them, ordered the one to take up his position on the right of the papal throne and the other on the left, and subsequently, on the express understanding that peace between the two families should thenceforth be maintained, he converted into hereditary dignities these positions to the right and left of the throne, the Orsini and the Colonnas taking it in turns to have the respect due to the emperor and subsequently, on the 1370, when the Popes were still accustomed to drive about Rome, to precede on horseback the pontifical equipage. If the Pope himself went on horseback, it was the prince assistant who held the stirrup for His Holiness to mount and who led the horse.

The Colonna family, which has furnished at least half a dozen Popes to the Catholic Church, including Marcel, who reigned in 304, and Martin V., who occupied the chair of St. Peter in 1417, owes, according to tradition, its name to the possession of what is alleged to be a portion of the column to which Christ was tied when scourged on the eve of His crucifixion, and which is still preserved as a sacred relic, and having been brought from Jerusalem in the first century of the Christian era. It is the principal treasure, of course, of the grand old Colonna Palace at Rome, which was built away back in the fourth century, on the Square of the Apostles, and which has had among its occupants Popes Martin V. and Julius II., as well as that celebrated Cardinal Borromeo, subsequently canonized as St. Charles.

The widow of Don Marc Antonio Colonna who was the chief of the family until last year, is insured as the result of a romantic tragedy of many years ago, and while one of her two daughters is married to Don Angelo Chigi, the other, a dame du palais of the Queen, is the wife of Prince Teano, eldest son and heir of the Duke of Sermoneta and head of the house of Cactani. She has achieved considerable fame as an aviator. It must thoroughly be understood that if the present chief of the house of Colonna has been deprived of his hereditary dignity of prince assistant of the pontifical throne, it is solely and entirely because of his refusal to abandon his official relations with the Italian court and government. There was no question, as so many people seem to believe, of his sacrificing his social connections. For when his elder brother, the late Marc Antonio succeeded on the death of his father, to the post of principal chamberlain, he gave up his commission in the army and his office of principal chamberlain to Queen Margaret, but utterly declined to sever his social relations with all the friends he had formed in the white aristocracy.

One day Leo XIII., who was very fond of him, began teasing him about the matter and to speak in a rather satirical tone about his associations with "those people over there," meaning the Quirinal. Without a minute's delay, Don Marc Antonio replied, "Holy Father, I know the respect and regard which I owe to Your Holiness and to the high office which has come to me by inheritance. But I cannot and will not give up my personal associations and my private friendships. I know that Your Holiness will forgive me this personal, straightforward declaration. I cannot do otherwise."

The smile disappeared from the marked features of the aged Pontiff, and gave place to a particularly kind and encouraging expression, as he looked at Don Marc Antonio, who had just taken a pinch of snuff from his little gold snuff-box. He had always treated Colonna with the most marked consideration. After this, his behavior to him was signalized by affection, and the grand old Pope, one of the most remarkable that ever occupied the chair of St. Peter, showed by his attitude that, regardless of mere politics, he appreciated in the fullest measure the bold refusal of Don Marc Antonio to turn his back on his old friends.

Lord Athlumney, who arrived the other day from the West Indies in New York, where he has been spending the week at the Waldorf-Astoria, is celebrated as the cleverest bridge player in United Kingdom, but has made it a rule never to play for money. Of course, this has served to vastly increase his popularity, as he almost invariably wins. Moreover, it is extremely politic on his part. For, being a poor man, if he played for money, he would be making a living at the card table. He is a splendid swimmer, and on one memorable occasion saved the life of Mrs. George Cornwallis West, formerly Lady Randolph Churchill, by diving into the sea and rescuing her from the imminent danger of drowning.

His patronymic is Somerville, and his family is an ancient Scotch house, which has been settled for some three centuries in Ireland. One of its members, Sir Quilley Somerville, was Lord Mayor of Dublin in 1748, and as such received a baronetcy from George II., which was held by the present Lord Athlumney's father until he was raised to the peerage for his services as Irish secretary. WANT FULL PANEL IN GRAFT INQUIRY

Not Enough Eligibles Left After Legal Exemptions to Begin Investigation.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.] Norfolk, Va., February 18.—The special grand jury summoned to take up the question of alleged grafting between naval commissary stewards and Atlantic Coast navy provision contractors failed of a sufficient panel here to-day and had to be adjourned until tomorrow. Nine out of twenty-three jurors who had been summoned presented such excuses as exempted them under the law, and this left only fourteen eligibles.

Judge Waddill said the case was of such importance that jurors should not be summoned in a hurry, and adjourned to allow time for the summoning of other suitable jurors in sufficient number to make up a complete panel.

United States District Attorney D. Lawrence Croser said that it would take several days to complete the work before the grand jury, and that he would not feel justified in going ahead with a panel of only sixteen. He asked for a full panel when the jury was sworn. Captain Roger Waller, who, as commander of the battleship Louisiana, started the naval commissary investigation some months ago, and Captain A. T. Maris, of the Marine Corps, who acted as judge advocate general for the navy at the court of inquiry investigation into the alleged grafting matters, were both in court to-day, with other witnesses to be sent before the grand jury as government witnesses. They will appear again to-morrow.

ANNUAL CELEBRATION.

Washington Literary Society Plans for Reunion of Alumni. Charlottesville, Va., February 18.—The Washington Literary Society of the University of Virginia will hold its annual Washington's birthday celebration on Saturday evening at 8 o'clock in Marlborough Hall. The occasion will be a reunion of the alumni of the society.

The principal speakers will be A. L. Well, of Pittsburgh, and Judge B. P. Long, of North Carolina. Mr. Well is well known throughout the country as an authority on municipal government, and recently delivered a widely discussed paper before the Economic Club of New York. It is also expected that Ex-Lieutenant-Governor Francis T. Winston, of North Carolina, will speak.

Immediately after the exercises there will be a reception in the Washington Literary Society Hall.

TEACHERS WILL MEET AT BRISTOL

Educational Conference in Ninth Virginia District Opens Thursday.

Bristol, Va., February 18.—Much interest attaches to the educational conference to be held in this city February 20, 21 and 22, when delegates from all counties of the Ninth Virginia District are to assemble here. Special rates have been offered on the railroads coming into this city as a means of inducing many teachers to attend. Prominent among the men who have been conspicuous in educational affairs in Virginia who are expected to address the conference are Dr. E. G. Riegdon, former State Superintendent of Public Instruction, but now in the United States Bureau of Education; Superintendent H. C. Stearnes and Dr. J. P. McCounell, the latter now principal of the Radford Normal and Industrial School. Dr. E. G. Williams, of the State Health Board, is also scheduled for an address, while Mr. Dashiell, of the Co-operative Educational Association, is expected to attend.

The Democracy of Scott County is advocating the candidacy of Henry S. Kane, of Gate City, for the position of collector of internal revenue for the Sixth collecting district, under the administration of Woodrow Wilson. A delegation of prominent Scott County Democrats will be here on the morning of this week to present the claims of Mr. Kane. Scott County's candidate has been prominent in this end of the State for a number of years. He formerly represented the Second Senatorial District of Virginia in the General Assembly of the State, having defeated Captain Stemp, of Lee County, who was the Republican nominee. This was in 1895. It is said that he will come before the committee at its meeting here Thursday, endorsed by many prominent Democrats of the Ninth Virginia District.

The Rev. E. L. Ritchie, of Burke's Garden, has accepted a call to the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, in this city, and has held his initial service. He succeeds the Rev. J. W. Link, who resigned a few months ago to accept a call to a church in the Valley of Virginia. The new pastor is a native of North Carolina and is about thirty years of age and married.

The East Tennessee group of bankers, J. W. Willis, of Greeneville, Tenn., chairman, will hold their annual meeting in Bristol on February 25. The Bristol Board of Trade and the local bankers are preparing to entertain them in good style. One of the features of the occasion will be a banquet given by the bankers of the city.

Professor H. A. Morgan, head of the Tennessee Agricultural Experiment Station of the University of Tennessee, and J. A. Ebbas, of the Federal Department of Agriculture, will each address the bankers upon the subject of "The Relations of Banking Institutions to Agriculture."
